COMPLAINT SEEKING THE AVOIDANCE AND RECOVERY OF FRAUDULENT TRANSFERS

Gregory M. Messer, the Chapter 7 Trustee (the “Trustee” or “Plaintiff”) of the estate of Fyre Festival LLC (“Fyre Festival” or the “Debtor”), by and through his counsel, Klestadt Winters Jureller Southard & Stevens, LLP, as and for his complaint (the “Complaint”) herein against Kendall Jenner Inc. and Kendall Jenner (collectively, “Jenner” or the “Defendants”), upon information and belief, alleges as follows:

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

William Z. McFarland, a/k/a Billy McFarland (“McFarland”) and his business partner, hip hop artist Jeffrey Atkins, a/k/a Ja Rule (“Ja Rule”), started Fyre Media Inc. (“Fyre Media”) in early 2016 with the intention of creating and promoting a software application for booking entertainment. In or around late-summer 2016, the two conceived of the “Fyre Festival” (the “Festival”), which was to be a unique destination concert experience in the Caribbean aimed at young millennials and featuring a number of top musical acts. The Festival was scheduled over two weekends in April and May 2017 in the Exumas, Bahamas, and was intended to, among other things, promote Fyre Media’s booking application. The Festival was self-described in an offering memorandum designed to solicit investments as follows:

OVERVIEW

Fyre Festival leverages our global access to talent and our understanding of the millennial demographic to create

THE CULTURAL EXPERIENCE OF THE DECADE.

Fyre Festival is a rich experience that emboldens our quest to connect to a diverse set of influencers.

For two weekends in April and May, the curious and adventurous come together on a private Exuma island:

Fyre Festival will feature music from the greatest talents in the world, immersive experiences through art, theater, and a weekend long treasure hunt; as well as informative discussions with some of the brightest minds in the world. Fyre will be defined by its ability to connect: the ultimate in a tasteful experience.

The Festival was promoted on Instagram, Twitter and other social media outlets by numerous “influencers” including socialite and model Defendant Kendall Jenner, as well as a number of other famous models like Bella Hadid and Emily Ratajkowski. Ticket buyers were promised an exotic island adventure with luxury accommodations, gourmet food, the hottest musical acts and celebrity attendees. The unique social media marketing method employed by Fyre Festival tapped in on the power of FOMO (short for “fear of missing out”) and was extraordinarily successful amongst millennials, resulting in significant ticket sales.

When concertgoers arrived at the Festival on April 27, 2017, they “were met with total disorganization and chaos.”¹ None of the promised musical acts showed up or performed. The luxury accommodations turned out to be FEMA disaster relief tents. The gourmet food consisted of the now infamous cheese sandwich served in a Styrofoam container that was even joked about by Tina Fey during her opening monologue at the 2019 Academy Awards.² Feral dogs roamed the site and no models or celebrities, including Jenner and others that promoted the Festival and/or told their social media followers that they would be there, were in attendance. The disaster that became of the Festival is now infamous, capturing the attention of popular culture and spawning two separate documentaries on Hulu and Netflix.

McFarland raised and spent over $16 million in connection with the failed Festival, at least that the Trustee has identified thus far.³ Nearly all of those funds were deposited into and disbursed from accounts held by Fyre Media, Fyre Festival’s parent company (Fyre Media and Fyre Festival collectively, the “Fyre Entities”), or transferred by Fyre Media to McFarland and then disbursed by McFarland. Most of the funds were borrowed from individuals and institutions that were defrauded by McFarland. Among many other things, McFarland promised investors significant returns and told them that Fyre Festival owned land in Exuma worth $8.4 million and had over $14 million in receivables, none of which was true. McFarland is now serving a six-year sentence in federal prison and owes over $26 million in restitution on account of his frauds.

² Ms. Fey said to the crowd, “hey everybody, look under your seats, you are all getting one of those cheese sandwiches from the Fyre Festival.”

³ Accounts of the amounts of money raised and spent vary. The United States Securities and Exchange Commission (the “SEC”) and the United States Attorney claim that over $16.5 million was raised from defrauded investors in Fyre Festival, plus an additional approximately $8 million raised from defrauded investors for Fyre Media. The Trustee’s investigation has identified approximately $12.5 million raised from defrauded investors and creditors of Fyre Festival, approximately $1.4 million raised from ticket sales, approximately $1.5 million raised from a company for advances on prospective future ticket sales, and approximately $1 million raised from sales on prepaid wrist bands from Festival attendees. Funds raised for the Festival would most often be deposited into Fyre Media accounts, then transferred directly to recipients or transferred to McFarland’s personal accounts before finally reaching the ultimate recipient.

McFarland used much of the funds raised from defrauded investors and ticketholders to fund legitimate expenses of the doomed Festival. However, significant amounts were recklessly spent in continuation of McFarland's schemes. Just by way of example, significant amounts were spent on musical acts that never showed up (including $500,000 to Blink 182), over $2.25 million to influencers that promoted the Festival on social media without indicating to their followers and the public that they were paid for promoting the Festival (including $275,000 to Jenner for a single social media post), over $500,000 to the company that shot and edited Fyre Festival ads and Festival footage which ultimately used that footage to produce a profitable and popular documentary panning the Festival (without sharing any of the proceeds of that documentary with those victimized by McFarland), and over $1.8 million for prepaid private flights to and from the Festival that never happened.

By the instant Complaint, the Trustee seeks the avoidance of $275,000 paid to Jenner for just making the following single post to her Instagram account promoting the Festival:

Jenner did not indicate to the public that she was paid to promote the Festival. Further, Jenner's reference to her "G.O.O.D. Music Family" as "headliners" at the Festival, intentionally led certain members of the public and ticket purchasers to believe that Jenner's brother in law, famous musician and GOOD Music record label founder Kanye West, may be or would be performing at the Festival. In fact, Mr. West was never going to perform at the Festival. This conduct demonstrates a clear lack of good faith on Jenner's part.

The Trustee asserts that the Transfers are avoidable as actual fraudulent transfers as they were made in continuation of McFarland's fraud which involved duping investors, creditors and the public into investing in Fyre Festival and purchasing tickets to the doomed Festival.

FACTS COMMON TO ALL CAUSES OF ACTION

A. Fyre Festival – Origin to Disaster

16. In or around 2013, McFarland, then 22 years old, founded Magnises Inc., a company that marketed an invitation-only charge card. The Magnises card was marketed as the “black card” for millennials and was supposed to entitle card holders to exclusive tickets, events and experiences.

17. In or around March 2016, McFarland and Ja Rule founded Fyre Media, a digital media company, to develop, launch and manage a software application to be, in its words, “the first global marketplace for seamless and secure live entertainment booking.”

18. The concept for Fyre Media’s business and platform was created by some combination of McFarland and Ja Rule. McFarland served as Fyre Media’s Chief Executive Officer.

19. In mid- to late-2016, McFarland and Ja Rule conceived of and began promoting the Festival as a unique concert experience that would take place in Exuma over the course of two weekends in April and May of 2017.

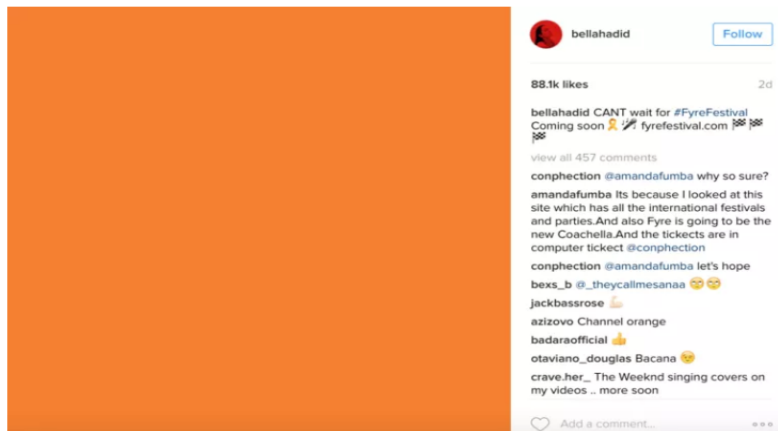

20. Tickets to the Festival were billed as “exclusive” and purported to cost between $1,200 and $100,000 per ticket or ticket package. In promotional materials, the Festival was called “the cultural experience of the decade” which included travel via private jet from Miami to the Bahamas, VIP accommodations and A-list musical performances.

21. Fyre Festival promised attendees that the Festival would feature top musical talent including Blink 182, Pusha T, Tyga, Major Lazer, Disclosure, Migos, and Kaytranada, among many others.

22. The Festival was promoted through celebrities and influencers on social media including Defendant Jenner, Bella Hadid, Emily Ratajkowski, Elsa Hosk, Lais Ribeiro, Hailey Baldwin (n/k/a Hailey Bieber), Rose Bertram, Gizele Oliveira, Chanel Iman, and Shanina Shaik.

23. Many of the models that promoted the Festival were featured in a promotional video shot and released in or around December 2016 (the “Promotional Video”)⁴, which promised “an immersive music festival” that “exceeds all expectations” to take place “over two transformative weekends” in April and May 2017 “on a remote and private island in the Exumas” that was “once owned by Pablo Escobar.”

24. Many of the models and influencers posted a simple orange tile with a link to the Promotional Video to their Instagram accounts at the same time in order to disrupt users’ news feeds and draw attention to the Festival, like this post from Bella Hadid:

25. A majority if not all of the models and influencers that were paid to promote the Festival, including Jenner, did not indicate to their fans and followers that they were paid to advertise and promote the Festival. Nor did they inform their fans and followers that they ultimately decided not to attend the Festival because of problems with the Festival of which they and their agencies were uniquely aware.

26. Through the advertisements and promotions, McFarland and other employees of the Fyre Entities intentionally led the public to believe that the Festival would be filled with famous models on an exotic private island with “first-class culinary experiences and a luxury atmosphere.”

27. When attendees began arriving on Great Exuma for the Festival on April 27, 2017, they were met with chaos.

28. The luxury accommodations promised to Festival attendees were actually FEMA disaster relief tents with plastic-wrapped mattresses, which, regardless of quality, were grossly insufficient in number to house the number of attendees. The gourmet food consisted of the now infamous cheese sandwich. Ferrell dogs roamed the site. Attendees’ luggage was dumped out of trucks with no organization. No Fyre Festival personnel had answers for the confused attendees.

29. At 3:06 pm on April 27, 2017, the band Blink 182, which was supposed to be one of the headliners for the Festival, tweeted:

Regrettably, and after much careful and difficult consideration, we want to let you know that we won’t be performing at Fyre Fest in the Bahamas this weekend and next weekend. We’re not confident that we would have what we need to give you the quality of performances we always give our fans.

30. Blink 182 had already been paid $500,000 when it cancelled at the last minute. The band has retained those funds. In its cancellation tweet, the band did not disclose to its fans and others any of the problems that it was having with Fyre Festival and its management, or that the Festival appeared to be in serious trouble.

31. Finally, on the morning of April 28, 2017, Fyre Festival announced on Twitter, “after assessing the situation this morning and looking at best options for our guests, we cannot move forward as we hoped we could. . . .”

32. Attendees had significant difficulty getting off the island once they were there, and many were locked in the airport for a night while they waited for return flights.

33. The Bahamas Ministry of Tourism released this statement on April 28th, describing the chaotic event⁵:

We are extremely disappointed in the way the events unfolded yesterday with the Fyre Festival. We offer a heartfelt apology to all who traveled to our country for this event. Tourism is our number one industry and it is our aim to deliver world-class experiences and events. Hundreds of visitors to Exuma were met with total disorganization and chaos. The organizers of Fyre recently asked the Ministry of Tourism for support for their private event. The Ministry of Tourism is not an official sponsor of Fyre Festival. Given the magnitude of this undertaking, the MOT lent its support as we do with all international events. We offered advice and assisted with communications with other government agencies. The event organizers assured us that all measures were taken to ensure a safe and successful event but clearly they did not have the capacity to execute an event of this scale. A team of Ministry of Tourism representatives is on the island to assist with the organization of a safe return of all Fyre Festival visitors. It is our hope that the Fyre Festival visitors would consider returning to the Islands Of The Bahamas in the future to truly experience all of our beauty.

34. In the aftermath of the Festival, both Hulu and Netflix released documentaries about the Festival – Hulu’s Fyre Fraud, released on January 14, 2019, and Netflix’s Fyre: The Greatest Party That Never Happened, released on January 18, 2019. Both documentaries chronicle McFarland’s frauds and the disaster that became of the Festival.

B. Fyre Festival Raised Funds by Defrauding Lenders, Investors and Ticketholders

35. McFarland raised money for the Festival by defrauding investors, lenders and ticket purchasers. Fyre Festival raised and expended not less than $16.5 million according to the SEC and United States Attorney.

36. McFarland acted as the primary solicitor of investments in Fyre Festival via investment contracts, which gave investors the rights to profits in the Festival's commercial enterprises.

37. In offering documents and other communications with Fyre Festival investors, McFarland:

- a) Made false statements concerning Fyre Festival's assets;
- b) Falsified financial data;
- c) Made false claims of affiliations with talent;
- d) Created a fraudulent brokerage statement in order to suggest to investors and banks that McFarland personally possessed collateral sufficient to securitize investments; and
- e) Claimed that he would obtain event cancellation insurance for the Festival, which he never did.

38. In January 2017, McFarland created a Private Placement Memorandum (the "PPM") concerning Fyre Media and Fyre Festival, which was widely distributed to existing and prospective investors in early 2017.

39. The PPM included, on Fyre Festival's balance sheet as of January 1, 2017, assets including accounts receivable of $14,827,382.97 and "BlackPoint Exuma Land" valued at $8,400,000. These assets did not exist. Certain investors relied on the claimed existence of these assets in making their investment decision.

40. In response to requests from certain existing and prospective Fyre Festival investors that their investments be collateralized, McFarland created a fake brokerage statement, which showed that McFarland owned $2.56 million in shares in the common stock of Facebook, Inc. ("Facebook"). In fact, McFarland owned just $1,499 worth of Facebook shares, a tiny fraction of the shares indicated by the fake brokerage statement.

41. McFarland attached the fake brokerage statement to certain executed investor agreements and made numerous misstatements concerning his fictitious shares of Facebook in emails and texts to other prospective investors.

42. In early 2017, in an effort to keep the struggling Fyre Festival afloat, McFarland sought millions of dollars in personal loans from two banks. To attempt to induce the banks to grant him loans, McFarland provided false information in his loan applications, including representations inflating his net worth and reiterating the false claim that he owned $2.56 million worth of Facebook stock.

43. McFarland also provided one of the banks with a copy of the fake brokerage statement, as well as a fraudulent Fyre Media income statement, which grossly inflated the company's revenue and income.

44. Although both of McFarland's loan applications ultimately were denied, he told potential investors that the loans had been approved and that monies from these loans could serve as collateral for their investments.

45. As an inducement to invest in Fyre Festival, McFarland also falsely communicated to actual and prospective investors that they would have the rights to payouts from Fyre Festival event cancellation policies if the festival did not proceed as planned. In reality, however, McFarland never obtained any event cancellation policies for the Festival.

46. McFarland's false statements confirming the purported existence of these policies were material to the decision of at least one investor to invest in Fyre Festival.

47. McFarland also falsely told investors that a number of stars—including Justin Bieber and Drake—would perform at the Fyre Festival, when, in fact, no such agreements were ever reached. McFarland persisted in these false representations regarding artists, despite requests to desist by the artists' agents.

48. McFarland and Fyre Festival representatives made numerous misrepresentations to ticket purchasers in order to induce them to purchase tickets and attend the Festival. Fyre Festival received in excess of $1.4 million from ticket sales, plus an additional $1.5 million from a ticket vendor for advance ticket sales.

49. When Fyre Festival was desperate for money to fund the doomed Festival, it informed ticket purchasers by email that:

Fyre Festival is a cashless festival designed to be experienced with your digitally-enabled Fyre Band, a wristband that acts as your festival ID and password-protected payment method. ATMs will not be available at either event site, so plan ahead if you think you'll want cash on hand in case of emergency.

50. In the one week leading up to the Festival, Fyre Festival actively encouraged ticketholders to put significant amounts onto their prepaid wristbands (the "Fyre Bands"), recommending $300 per attendee per day, and sent emails to attendees who had already put significant funds on their Fyre Bands telling them that they should "top off" the amount on their Fyre Bands ahead of the Festival. In just one week, Fyre Festival raised over $1 million in prepayments from ticketholders on their Fyre Bands.

C. McFarland's Criminal Conduct and Admission of Fraud

51. On October 2, 2017, McFarland was charged by the United States Attorney with wire fraud in connection with allegedly defrauding investors in the Festival and Fyre Media. See

United States v. William McFarland, Case no. 17-cr-00600 (NRB) (S.D.N.Y. Oct. 2, 2017) (the “McFarland Criminal Action”).

52. On March 6, 2018, McFarland pled guilty to, among other things, wire fraud. In connection with his plea, McFarland testified as follows:

In an attempt to promote the digital application [of Fyre Media], I conceived and launched the idea for a music festival, the Fyre Festival. While my intention for the Fyre Festival was legitimate, I grossly underestimated the resources that it would take to execute an event of the magnitude that I had come up with.

So in an attempt to raise the funds that I deemed necessary to execute the event, I lied to investors about various aspects of Fyre Media and my personal finances. These lies included false documents and information that I am aware were transmitted across interstate lines.

In addition, on or about April 2017, I engaged in a fraudulent scheme in connection with a ticket vendor. Specifically I provided false information to the vendor about Fyre Media’s financial condition before entering into a guarantee agreement that induced the vendor to pay $2 million for a block of advance tickets in order to help fund the Fyre Festival.

McFarland Criminal Action, Dkt. No. 35, transcript of Mar. 2, 2019 hearing, pp.12-13.

53. Before being sentenced on the original charges in connection with the Fyre Entities, on June 12, 2018, McFarland was arrested and charged for a second time in connection with another alleged ticket-selling scheme.

54. On July 26, 2018, McFarland pled guilty to, among other things, wire fraud and bank fraud while on pretrial release in connection with the new charges.

55. As set forth in greater detail in the government’s sentencing memorandum, “[w]ith Fyre Media in 2016 and Fyre Festival in 2017, McFarland’s lies about the rapid growth and incredible financial success of the Fyre companies led roughly 80 investors to lose over $24 million.” The Government’s Sentencing Memorandum, Docket No. 63 in Case No. 17-cv-00600, p. 23 (S.D.N.Y. Oct. 3, 2018).

56. In sentencing McFarland, the Honorable Naomi Reice Buchwald, United States District Judge, noted:

While defendant has argued that he committed these crimes because he suffers from certain psychological conditions which explain his actions, I reject that evaluation. Rather, it is my conclusion, based on all the submissions which I've carefully considered, that the defendant is a serial fraudster, and that to date his fraud, like a circle, has no end.

Beyond his statement in Court today, which I do not know exactly how to evaluate, the absence prior to today of any moral recognition of the wrongfulness of his conduct is at the heart of the need for specific deterrence. It is also clear that Mr. McFarland has actually been dishonest most of his life. He started out with small scams which have grown over time.

McFarland Criminal Action, Dkt. No. 69, p.55, LL.6-18 (Oct. 11, 2018).

57. On October 16, 2018, the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York entered judgment against McFarland, which included a term of six (6) years in federal prison and forfeiture to the United States in the amount of $26,191,306.28, the amount that McFarland raised from defrauded lenders and investors in the Fyre Entities.

D. The Transfer of Fyre Festival Funds in, to and Through Fyre Media and McFarland's Accounts

58. Fyre Festival maintained only two financial accounts – escrow accounts for the benefit of a flight vendor at First Western Trust Bank (account nos. ending in 0793 and 2468) (the “Air Travel Accounts”). The Air Travel Accounts were established and used exclusively in connection with the booking of and payment for flights, a requirement of the Federal Aviation Administration.

59. The Air Travel Accounts were funded with at least $1.8 million in Festival Funds (as defined below), including by three transfers – $1.22 million from McFarland that he received from Fyre Media, $313,000 from Fyre Media, and $240,000 directly from defrauded investor Carola Jain.

60. All other funds raised and expended by Fyre Festival were deposited into and disbursed directly from accounts maintained by Fyre Media and McFarland.

61. Not less than $14,415,346.60 of Fyre Festival's funds (together with any funds borrowed by, invested in, received for the account of, or otherwise belonging to Fyre Festival, the "Festival Funds") were transferred to, deposited into and disbursed from Fyre Media's bank accounts (collectively, the "Festival to Media Transfers"). The Festival to Media Transfers include $10,471,000 in transfers by investors in and lenders to Fyre Festival, $1,404,531.86 in revenues from ticket purchasers, $1,500,000 from a company that paid for advance ticket sales, and $1,039,814.77 from ticket purchasers for amounts put on their Fyre Bands.

62. Fyre Media then made transfers of Festival Funds to McFarland (collectively, the "Festival to McFarland Transfers", and together with the Festival to Media Transfers, the "Insider Fraudulent Transfers"). The Festival to McFarland Transfers from January 1, 2017 to April 30, 2017 were not less than $10,993,267.51.

E. Use of Fyre Festival Funds

63. Much of the Festival Funds were used to pay vendors and service providers which provided legitimate and necessary services to the Fyre Festival.

64. However, much of the Festival Funds were used to pay musical acts that never showed up or performed at the Festival, models and influencers such as defendant Jenner who promoted the Festival at significant cost without disclosing to the public that they were paid for promoting the Festival, a production company that ultimately used the footage to co-produce a profitable Netflix documentary, a $187,250 deposit to a catering company that never provided food to the Festival, and over $1.8 million for flights that never took place. These parties received Festival Funds at the unfair expense of Fyre Festival's defrauded investors, creditors and ticketholders. These expenditures are collectively referred to herein as the "Festival Fraudulent Transfers").

65. McFarland commingled in his personal account his assets and the assets of Fyre Festival, Fyre Media and possibly other entities under his control. During the period where the Festival to McFarland Transfers were made, McFarland spent not less than $315,645.87 on personal expenses including a luxury penthouse apartment, interior design and home furnishings, hotel stays, dining and entertainment, transportation, clothing and other things.

66. Other Festival Funds were simply used to make "preferential transfers" to certain of Fyre Festival's creditors, which should be recovered by the Trustee for the benefit of all of the creditors of Fyre Festival (collectively, the "Festival Preferential Transfers").

67. The Trustee has commenced an action against Fyre Media and McFarland seeking the avoidance in the first instance of the Insider Fraudulent Transfers as well as the exclusive right to pursue the recovery of any Festival Fraudulent Transfers and Festival Preferential Transfers.

F. Jenner's Relationship with Fyre Festival and the Instant Transfers

68. Jenner is a famous model and social media influencer. According to Forbes, Jenner is the highest paid model in the world with earnings exceeding $22.5 million for the year ending June 2018.

69. The Fyre Entities entered into an agreement with Jenner pursuant to which Jenner was required to make a single social media post promoting the Festival (the "Promotional Post") in exchange for $250,000.

70. In connection with the agreement between the Fyre Entities and Jenner, the following Transfers totaling $275,000.00 were made to or for the benefit of Jenner:

Date	Transferor	Amount	Initial Transferee	Potential Ultimate Transferee or Beneficiary
01/3/2017	Fyre Media	$250,000.00	Kendall Jenner Inc.	Kendall Jenner
01/12/2017	Fyre Media	$25,000.00		Kendall Jenner

(as defined above, the “Transfers”).

71. It is unknown to the Trustee why the Transfers exceeded the amount required under the agreement.

72. Following receipt of the first $250,000 Transfer, on or around January 5, 2017, Jenner made the following Promotional Post to her Instagram page:

73. Following the Promotional Post, Jenner received the additional $25,000.

74. The Promotional Post has been removed from Jenner’s Instagram page.

75. The Promotional Post failed to include any indication that Jenner was paid to promote the Festival pursuant to the guidelines of the Federal Trade Commission, which require as follows:

When there exists a connection between the endorser and the seller of the advertised product that might materially affect the weight or credibility of the endorsement (i.e., the connection is not reasonably expected by the audience), such connection must be fully disclosed.

116 C.F.R. § 255.5.

76. The Promotional Post successfully promoted the fantasy that the Festival would be populated with models and beautiful people and that fans would be missing out if they were not there.

77. Based upon the language used by Jenner in the Promotional Post, certain members of the public reasonably believed that Jenner's brother in law and GOOD Music record label founder Kanye West would be performing at the Festival. In fact, Mr. West never agreed to perform at the Festival.

78. Jenner never informed the public that she either had no intention of attending the Festival, or that she ultimately determined not to attend the Festival.

79. At least two years after the Festival was scheduled to occur, Jenner reportedly said this to the New York Times when asked about her promotion of the Festival: "[y]ou get reached out to by people to, whether it be to promote or help or whatever, and you never know how these things are going to turn out, sometimes it's a risk" and "I definitely do as much research as I can, but sometimes there isn't much research you can do because it's a starting brand and you kind of have to have faith in it and hope it will work out the way people say it will."

80. Jenner has retained the full value of the Transfers and the funds received from the Fyre Entities.

AS AND FOR A FIRST CAUSE OF ACTION
(Fraudulent Transfers – Actual Fraud – 11 U.S.C. §§ 544(b), 548(a)(1)(A) and 550;
And N.Y. Debtor and Creditor Law § 276)
(Against All Defendants)

81. Plaintiff repeats and re-alleges each and every allegation set forth in paragraphs 1 through 80 of this Complaint as if fully set forth at length herein.

82. Each of the Transfers was made from Festival Funds.

83. Each of the Transfers constituted a transfer of an interest of Fyre Festival within the meaning of section 101(54) of the Bankruptcy Code.

84. Each of the Transfers was to or for the benefit of the Defendants as set forth above.

85. Fyre Festival was at all times undercapitalized and incapable of putting on the Festival in the manner promised to ticketholders, or repaying the funds borrowed from lenders to the Fyre Festival, or returning investments made in the Fyre Festival.

86. McFarland admitted to his fraudulent scheme in connection with his guilty plea in the McFarland Criminal Action and has been sentenced to and is serving a 6-year term in federal prison as a result of his wrongful conduct.

87. A judgment of restitution in favor of the United States has been entered against McFarland in the amount of $26,191,306.28 on account of the funds raised by McFarland through his fraudulent conduct.

88. The Transfers were made in continuation of McFarland's scheme to defraud investors, lenders, and ticket purchasers of the Fyre Festival.

89. The Transfers were made with actual intent by Fyre Festival to hinder, delay, and/or defraud Fyre Festival's existing creditors, ticket holders and investors, and individuals and entities to which Fyre Festival would become obligated.

90. All of the Transfers were made within two (2) years of the Petition Date.

91. There are creditors that hold unsecured claims against Fyre Festival allowable under Section 502 of the Bankruptcy Code that were creditors at the time each of the Transfers were made.

92. Based upon the foregoing, the Trustee is entitled to an order and judgment against each of the Defendants avoiding the Transfers in the full amount of $275,000, making each jointly and severally liable for the return of the Transfers, and awarding prejudgment interest and attorneys' fees.

WHEREFORE, the Trustee demands judgment against each of the Defendants avoiding the Transfers in the full amount of $275,000, making each jointly and severally liable for the return of the Transfers, and awarding prejudgment interest and attorneys' fees, and requests that the Court grant him such other and further relief as this Court deems just.
